

I am endorsing Carmela Warfield to be the next, most influential, most critical leader/servant of the Republican Party.

Carmela demonstrates these core values and character traits to an extraordinary degree:

- Negotiator
- Inspiring Leader
- Dedicated Servant
- Powerful Visionary

Unlike elections for party leadership of the past, we are in need of something new for the Republicans to return to prominence. For us to lead the true multi-cultural people who like to disagree, but like to disagree peacefully. This is not so for our opponents who will get you fired, thrown out, screamed at, shouted down if you dare to disagree with any part of the sexuality, gender, marriage, environmental, Palestinian/anti-Jewish State, religious-like agenda. For any non-leftist, we enjoy disagreement. They see it as a chance to control and create fear. They most love to be feared along with their government. Pronoun laws are the epitome of this use of fear and power to tear down your opponent.

Republicans in the digital age, which I call the age of distraction, are not as needed. No, that's not right. The purpose of conservatism is not as immediate as in times of hardship and war. In times of distraction, why do we need a free press, or freedom of speech (to disagree), or religion? Why do we need more than one culture? Shouldn't we all be forced by our government to believe the 'proper thing'? As conservatives we hear and see the seeds of control growing in our government and our left-wing opponents. While there is not a majority (at least not a comfortable majority) of true conservatives, there are lots of 'friends' of a multi-cultural society. A live-and-let-live society. This is the non-left coalition that we need to organize and lead. If for no other reason than to preserve the right to disagree and not lose jobs, family, freedom.

Republicans are fairly good at organizing as long as we have a good leader. Someone who knows what it takes to win an election. Republicans would do well to learn that there is a difference between running and winning. We need wise leaders who understand how to win in order to protect our rights. With the constant attacks on industry and reasonable regulation, we are seeing our jobs more and more on the line as well. As industry goes, so goes our ability to resist big-government.

In talking with Carmela, I see someone who is involved because we are playing checkers while the Dems play chess. We are running out of moves before our left-wing opponents say 'check mate' and there is no path back to freedom and our beloved multi-cultural republic.

Please join me in supporting Carmela Warfield as she runs for Republican Party Chair. Please also join me in re-doubling our efforts to defend freedom, faith and family against the rising tide of the left with whoever wins as Party Chair.

Sincerely,

Glen Biegel
District 11 Republican Party Chair (again)
